

FROM THE DESK OF PRINCIPAL

Dear all...I am delighted to note that Government Model College Deithor, in its nearly two years long promising journey from the inception, is going to publish the fourth edition of its annual News Letter "SAMPHRI: A Ray of Hope" for the academic year 2022-2023.

The Karbi Hills treasure one of the most naturally gifted and culturally vibrant regions of Assam. A writer of as high stature as Padmashree Rongbong Terang, former president of Asom Sahitya

Sabha has been a leading voice of reason in the contemporary Assamese art, literature and society for decades. In order to build a robust foundation of social transformation driven by an unwavering sense of optimism and collective responsibility, we are planning to host a National Seminar on the Life and Works of Rongbong Terang very soon. We are wholeheartedly convinced that the education in its true essence could instill hope in all strata of people, for a new dawn of an empowered society and citizenry.

I am also happy to share with all the stakeholders that the Central Library of our college will be named after noted novelist & dramatist, Late Bonglong Terang. Born in a remote place, Late Bonglong Terang in his life had to endure many hardships of different magnitude, and through his rich imagination and literary merit, gave us some of most the inspiring literaterary works in his lifetime. Indeed, such lived experiences are lasting source of inspiration and hope, which our Newsletter "SAMPHRI: A Ray of Hope" endeavours to encapsulate.

Dr. Dipok Kumar Bora, M.Sc; M. Phil; Ph. D
Principal

EDITOR'S NOTE

The study of sociologist Bourdieu is particularly significant at a time when media centric debates are taking place in the context of recent times. Bourdieu, speaking of two types of capital, defined social capital and cultural capital. According to him, the path to educational development of a person who gets a large network of social relations from the family is faster. If we go to highlight this point in the context of the media-centric debate of recent times, one thing is clear that the Assamese upper middle class, whose network of social relations is good.

Reading in any medium has been successful. Students of educational institutions like The Assam Jatiya Bidyalay National School cannot be said to have skills in both English and Assamese only because of the success of the institute. The social and cultural capital of its upper middle-class parent class can be thought of as a major source of academic development of the students in this field.

Therefore, it cannot be thought that there is no need to teach mathematics and science in English language at an early stage with such examples alone. English continues to be a major obstacle to academic advancement for ordinary students. It is because they have not been introduced to the English language from the primary level that the dropout rate of the poor and lower middle class is still high in higher education. On the other hand, at a time when our students have to work day and night to understand what they have already understood in Assamese, students of America and England get a chance to read world-famous journals such as lancet nature in English language. So, it is certain that the medium has created a wall in the journey of acquiring knowledge. Only if this wall can be broken will we see the true SAMPHRI or ray of hope in the academic field.
